

Costs and Benefits of Tax Regulations: Exploring Treasury's and OMB's New Responsibilities

Speaker Biographies

Susan Dudley is director of the George Washington University Regulatory Studies Center and distinguished professor of practice in the Trachtenberg School of Public Policy and Public Administration. She is past president of the Society for Benefit-Cost Analysis, a senior fellow with the Administrative Conference of the United States, a fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration, on the board of the National Federation of Independent Businesses Legal Center and Economists, and on the executive committee of the Federalist Society Administrative Law Group. Dudley was the presidentially appointed administrator of the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs (OIRA); directed the Regulatory Studies Program at the Mercatus Center, taught courses on regulation at the George Mason University School of Law; was a staff economist at OIRA, the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission; and was a consultant to government and private clients at Economists Incorporated. Dudley holds a bachelor's degree (summa cum laude) in resource economics from the University of Massachusetts Amherst and a master's degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Chye-Ching Huang is director of federal fiscal policy with the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities' (CBPP's) federal fiscal policy team, where she focuses on the fiscal and economic effects of federal tax and budget policy. She rejoined CBPP in 2011 after working as a senior lecturer at the University of Auckland in New Zealand, where she taught graduate and undergraduate tax law and conducted research in tax law and policy. Huang first joined CBPP in 2008 as a Fulbright Sir Wallace Rowling memorial fellow and was a research fellow on the federal fiscal policy team from June 2008 to March 2009. She previously worked on economic policy issues at the New Zealand Institute and has practiced as a tax solicitor. Huang holds a Bachelor of Commerce in economics and a Bachelor of Laws from the University of Auckland in New Zealand and an LLM from Columbia Law School.

Greg Leiserson is director of tax policy and senior economist at the Washington Center for Equitable Growth. His research focuses on the economics of tax, social insurance, and retirement policies. Before joining Equitable Growth, he was a senior economist at the White House Council of Economic Advisers and an economist in the US Treasury's Office of Tax Analysis. He holds a BA from Swarthmore College and a PhD from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Mark J. Mazur is the Robert C. Pozen director of the Urban-Brookings Tax Policy Center and a vice president at the Urban Institute. His research interests cover all aspects of tax policy. From 2012 until early 2017, he was the assistant secretary for tax policy at the US Department of the Treasury. Mazur served in the federal government for 27 years in various positions, including policy economist at the congressional Joint Committee on Taxation; senior economist at the President's Council of Economic Advisers; senior director at the National Economic Council; chief economist and senior policy adviser and director of policy at the US Department of Energy; acting administrator of the Energy Information Administration; director of research, analysis, and statistics at the Internal Revenue Service; and deputy assistant secretary for tax analysis in the Office of Tax Policy. Before entering public service, Mazur was an assistant professor in Heinz College at Carnegie-Mellon University. He has a bachelor's degree in financial administration from Michigan State University and a master's degree in economics and a PhD in business from Stanford University.

David Weisbach received his bachelor's degree in mathematics from the University of Michigan; a master's degree in advance study (mathematics) from Wolfson College, Cambridge; and a juris doctor degree from Harvard Law School. After graduating from law school, Weisbach clerked for Judge Joel M. Flaum of the US Court of Appeals for the Seventh Circuit and was an associate in the law firm Miller & Chevalier. In 1992, Weisbach joined the US Department of the Treasury, where he was an attorney-adviser in the Office of the Tax Legislative Counsel and, subsequently, was associate tax legislative counsel. In 1996, Weisbach was appointed associate professor of law at Georgetown Law Center and joined the University of Chicago faculty in 1998. He is also a senior fellow at the University of Chicago Computation Institute and Argonne National Laboratories and an international research fellow at the Saïd School of Business at Oxford University. Weisbach is primarily interested in issues relating to federal taxation and to climate change.